SA IN DANGER OF LOSING THIRD TEST

● Proteas lead by just 40 runs

SA reached the close against Australia in a perilous position at 140/4 in their second innings on the third day of the decisive third Test at Newlands yesterday, a lead of 40 runs with six wickets remaining.

Matthew Breetzke will resume on the fourth morning on 19 with batting partner Ryan Rickelton on 8 as SA look to post a total that will trouble Australia batting last.

How much is required remains to be seen. This is the first time a Test match has been played in October at Newlands, and while it has been warm, there is not the baking heat of mid-summer to open cracks and cause the pitch to crumble.

“The further it goes into the game, I think it’s only going to get harder and harder (to bat),” Australian Josh Inglis said.

“I’m not sure of a total (to chase). You don’t want them getting too many more than maybe 200 or so. Obviously spinning a fair bit. We’ve got a new ball in 30 odd overs.”

Aiden Markram was the first batter dismissed when he picked out mid-off Travis Head from the bowling of Mitchell Starc (2-29) for 1, before David Bedingham (11) was out on the pull for the second innings in a row.

Marques Ackerman made a bright 62 from 80 balls, his second half-century of the test after 95 in the first innings, but was cramped up by a Starc bouncer and caught at slip.

SA looked to be going to the close without further trouble until captain Temba Bavuma played a poor shot off spinner Nathan Lyon. – Reuters
